ANYONE CAN DO IT:

YOU CAN USE PRETTY

GENERATING

Sports

Research

- Seasonal, niched audience
- Probably skewed by Email audience and season but...
  - Sports content, 4%; Use site to find scores, 3%
  - We received less responses associated with the sports personas than originally expected, causing us to wonder if this audience / traffic is smaller. However, this may simply be due to the timing, as is it neither football nor basketball season.
- Spoke to a local high school football fan (James), mentioned importance of his Team and checking the Schedule, "not so much Rankings"
- Overlap with TV, or watch videos online
- Overlap with social media

From first Onsite: "The critical piece for sports is the corporate support GPB receives"

(underwriting?)

From this onsite, ha ha: Important to integrate with blog posts

Content Type: TV Program / Episode

Context: Node Content

This is the page for a single TV program and also for any specific episode of a TV program.

1 This menu will not appear by default. Some programs will have extended information which can be placed in this menu. Hosts and About are common use cases, but not the only ones.

2 Hero area which includes the show's Name, Hero Image, and an optional badge which indicates that this is a GPB original, triggered by the GPB Original field on the Program content type.

3 The genre of this show, specified through the Genre taxonomy in the Program content type.

4 The show's description, specified through the Description field on the Program content type.

5 The date and time of the next showing of this show, along with a link to further schedule information (this functionality may be ripe to be cut, since it would require more extensive integration with the schedule API)

6 The current episode available to watch. Which episode this is depends on the context described above.

Megh, Marissa, 2 months ago

My thought for this that there is a designed header area since it is different from Orchard.

Then from the Video hero through where the authors are listed is a field that has wysiwyg options as embeds like video, audio, slides, infographic, etc

The bottom area would be optional reference fields for them to add related stuff, blocks from a set in a controlled way.

tdr; I think news article is a no with a template, not layout built 2 replies
